

Muscadet with extended lees ageing

A move to recognise communes with specific soil types, aligned with wines that stay on their lees for a minimum of 17 months, has revived this Loire region, says Jim Budd

IN NEARLY 30 years of writing about wine, I've seen Muscadet go from huge popularity and success to crisis and popular scorn by consumers and now a gradual rehabilitation. Although the crus communaux represent a tiny proportion of total production, they are a very important factor in changing the image of Muscadet.

In 1989, Muscadet exported 2.2 million cases – 40% of production. The severe April 1991 frost and consequent price rises coupled with the arrival of wines from outside Europe, in particular Australia, ended its success. At the height of the boom, the area planted with Melon de Bourgogne (the grape used to make Muscadet) rose to about 13,000 hectares. This has now declined by nearly 40% to 8,075ha, which remains a very large area; Sancerre, for instance, is 2,900ha.

Producers' difficulties have since been exacerbated by a series of serious frosts – notably in 2008, 2012 and 2016 – allied with small crops from 2012 onwards.

Following the overdue tightening up of the sur lie regulations in 1994, there were long discussions over the next quality step up. Eventually it was agreed that long lees ageing associated with particular communes with specific geological type was the way forward. This was recognition of the growing practice by producers over the past 10 to 15 years to give a small proportion of their production extended ageing on lees. Muscadet is usually fermented and aged in large, shallow underground vats, though stainless steel vats are also used. Oak barrels are occasionally used but remain atypical.

The first three crus communaux – Clisson (granite), Gorges (gabbro) and Le Pallet (mix of granite, gneiss and gabbro) were approved in February 2011. Yields are limited to 45hl/ha. Wines from Le Pallet have to be lees aged for a minimum of 17 months, while the minimum for Clisson and Gorges is 24 months. Due to a quirk in the sur lie legislation these wines cannot be labelled sur lie as they are bottled after 30 November in the year following the vintage – the last date for bottling sur lie. Le Pallet cru wines tend to be fruity and forward; Clisson rich, full and flattering; and Gorges tighter and more restrained in character.

Four more cru communaux are due to be recognised: Château-Thébaud, Goulaine, Monnières-St-Fiacre and Mouzillon-Tillières – all in the Sèvre-et-Maine. Hopefully final approval will be given this summer. There are a further three crus in the pipeline – La Haie-Fouassière and Vallet (Sèvre-et-Maine), and Champtoceaux in Muscadet Coteaux du Loire. It is expected to be at least another two years before approval is given. In time there may be two – north and south – in the Côtes de Grandlieu.

Muscadet: know your vintages

2016 Small but fine crop. Severe April frost, widespread summer mildew, heat and drought. Fine autumn with just enough rain.

2015 Rich wines of good potential, but not yet bottled.

2014 Wet, cold summer, harvest saved by warm and dry September. Balanced, ageworthy wines. Most should be kept at least another year in bottle.

2013 Very cold spring led to a late-flowering vintage giving austere wines.

2012 Small crop from April frost. But very good wines starting to show well with very good potential to age.

2011 Early vintage starting with a warm dry, spring. Wet from mid-June with serious problems from rot.

2010 Less rich than 2009 but ageing fast.

2009 Ripe, rich grapes. Full-bodied wines with ageability.

The results

With 65% of wines scoring 90 points or more, including a perfect score from one of our experts, this tasting confirmed that Muscadet is back. Christelle Guibert reports

THE FACT THAT Decanter's last Muscadet panel tasting was back in the 1990s says much of the region's fall from fashion. But this long period in the wilderness may be about to change following this successful panel tasting.

With 63 of the 113 wines rated Highly Recommended, eight Outstanding and three Exceptional – including the first-ever 100-point wine from Decanter's Loire expert Jim Budd – the wines exceeded all expectations and the judges praised the tasting as their most exciting to date.

‘It highlighted just how amazing the quality can be, not just in terms of winemaking, but terroir expression and differences between the crus,’ said Ben Llewelyn. Chris Kissack said these results proved that Muscadet’s perception as ‘a simple wine you just knock back with oysters’ was outdated and should be put to rest. ‘You can still have your easy-drinking lunchtime wines, like your Petit Chablis or AC Chablis, but you can also step up to your 1er cru vineyards and have your grand cru vineyards for something even better.’

While the crus communaux may account for only 2% of Muscadet’s production, the panel was convinced they will raise the profile of the region and make consumers aware of the importance of terroir. Melon de Bourgogne may be a neutral grape variety, but it expresses its terroir well and the panel felt the relationship between the soil, grape and lees was the distinctive mark of the wines.

Gorges on gabbro soil and Château-Thébaud on granite seem to be our judges’ favourite crus, showing great minerality but needing time to develop. Monnières-St-Fiacre (gneiss) gave a much more elegant style with floral characters, while Clisson (granite) showed a clear identity with its energy, broader and more powerful style. Kissack was pleasantly surprised by the freshness and minerality of the Mouzillon-Tillières wines (gabbro).

In terms of vintages, 2014 and 2012 showed best, Kissack describing both as having ‘energy, acidity and fruit intensity’. Llewelyn was impressed by the older wines.

‘Extended lees ageing gives this extra dimension, texture and energy which is unique’ Ben Llewelyn

‘It’s very exciting to taste something from 2003 or 2006 which has been sitting on its lees for a long, extended period – this is Muscadet’s real calling card. Extended lees ageing gives the wine this extra dimension, texture and energy which is unique.’

Perversely, the 113 wines tasted here cannot be labelled ‘sur lie’ despite having spent a minimum of 17 months on their dead yeast particles. According to appellation rules, this is too long. To qualify as ‘sur lie’, wines have to spend one winter on their lees and then be bottled between 1 March and 31 December.

These older, extended lees-aged wines demonstrate Muscadet’s ageing potential, said Budd. ‘Many will happily last to 2030, if not longer.’ He also advised aerating the wines before serving, and not to chill them excessively: ‘You want them at cellar temperature – the temperature you’d serve fine white Burgundy.’ Grilled fish, seafood with white sauce, chicken or guinea fowl are more suitable accompaniments than oysters.

‘These are exciting, versatile wines, especially for the UK market where people appreciate fresher, more mineral, lower-alcohol wines, said Llewelyn. ‘Muscadet has everything: complexity, terroir characteristics and ageability – now it’s just a question of getting people to buy the wines again.’

The panel said behind their obvious enthusiasm over the quality of these wines, the frustration is that very few are available in the UK. However, Llewelyn said this is slowly being rectified by savvy importers. ‘And when the trade, press and consumers taste these wines, they will understand our excitement!’

This family domaine has long been one of Muscadet’s top estates. Pierre and Monique Luneau built its reputation, and today son Pierre-Marie and his wife Marie continue in the same tradition: careful work in the vineyard, the crus picked by hand, and meticulous winemaking using the traditional underground vats. They have long championed extended lees ageing for a small proportion of their wines and their top wines age brilliantly. The 2001 was the first vintage of Excelsior from vines planted on schist and mica-schist; the 2007 spent 36 months on its less.

Jim Budd Pronounced toasty aromas followed by a richly textured and lightly honeyed palate with wonderful complexity and superb length.

Chris Kissack This has evolved beautifully: smoky fruit aromas and a substantial yet elegant palate with notes of truffle and white pepper enhanced by a vibrant seam of minerality. Bright, long and complete.

Ben Llewelyn A scintillating yet subtle, creamy nose of white fruit, plum and honeycomb. The beautifully formed palate glides between acidity and richness, finishing with a delicious lift. A lovely, complete wine.

This 74-hectare domaine is run by four brothers – Denis, Jean-Paul, Laurent and Pascal. The 2012 Clisson came from a 1ha parcel of 67-year-old vines planted on sand above granite. The 2012 was the first vintage of this cuvée with extended lees ageing; subsequently it has

Decanter Exceptional 98 points Poiron Dabin, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine Château-Thébaud 2009 98 JB 99 CK 97 BL 97

Like many Muscadets, this cuvée is made a shallow underground vat no deeper than two metres so the lees are not compacted. Plus, being underground, the temperature is controlled naturally. The first vintage was 2007 and, like this 2009, the wine spent 84 months on its lees. The vines are planted on very thin soil above very flaky schist and granite, which always conserves moisture extremely well even in hot, dry summers. During maturation Jean-Michel Dabin gradually reduces the volume of wine until only 40 hectolitres is retained for the cru.

JB A rich and powerful style with lashings of lightly honeyed fruit. A clear demonstration of how a cru wine can be very different from ‘normal’ Muscadet. A fascinating wine, with the Melon de Bourgogne grape showing its Burgundian roots.

CK A rich and smoky nose amplified by a touch of brioche evolution, while the bold and polished palate boasts a broad substance with a maturing, rich fruit character. A minerally backbone fuels a pithy grip on the long finish.

BL Rich, complex aromatics lead to an intense palate with a broad texture, and the very long finish suggests pronounced lees influence. An impressive, thought-provoking wine.

been made in 2013, 2014 and 2015. This vintage was fermented and aged in underground vats for 48 months with lees stirring twice a year – in spring and October before the start of winter.

JB A softly textured style with an exquisite harmony between rich, ripe fruit and precise, fresh acidity, allowing for its long finish. This is a great advertisement for its genre.

CK A subtle yet serious mineral nose augmented by notes of oyster shell. Weighty in the mouth with a pronounced thrust of minerality yet it maintains a very relaxed, bright and elegant poise throughout. Impressive and imposing.

BL A well-defined, concentrated nose welcomes a palate with an alluring harmony between the creamy lees, citrus intensity and the stony influence of the vineyard’s granite soils. This has a real sense of place and is a joy to drink too.

Outstanding 95–97pts

Bouin, Haut Clos de la Pierre, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine 2003
97 JB 98 CK 95 BL 98
N/A UK www.domaine-de-beaurepaire.com
This 2003 from Christine, Jean-Paul and Guillaume Bouin spent an extraordinary 12 years on its lees. The 1ha Haut Clos de la Pierre is on a southwest-facing ridge on gravel, not typical of Mouzillon-Tillières, so this vineyard cannot be classified as a cru. The grapes were machine harvested followed by a three-month slow fermentation and then 12 years’ ageing with occasional lees stirring.

JB Opulent, toasty nose mirrors the rich style and evolved character on the palate. Very true to the heatwave vintage, but there is freshness on the finish and no lack of harmony. A compelling wine.

CK Intense nose of dried fruits, white peach and vanilla flower. In the mouth, it exhibits the richness of the vintage in substance and weight yet retains mineral freshness and uplifting acidity. Long, bright finish.

BL Intoxicating, impressive nose: fennel, honeycomb and floral notes. The palate is seamless and concentrated with broad fruit and a long, cool, mineral finish. Fascinating, highlighting Melon’s ability to age.

Domaine David, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine Goulaine 2012 97 JB 98 CK 97 BL 97
£13.50 Domaine Direct
Stéphane David and Sébastien Duvallet run this 30ha domaine founded in 1927. The 2012 Goulaine comes from a 1ha parcel of 45-year-old vines. Grapes were machine harvested (new rules for Goulaine entail hand harvesting from 2015 – this is done here by a team of handicapped workers). In December, after fermentation has finished, the wine is racked and returned to the fine lees for the remainder of its 36 months ageing. The first vintage of this cuvée was 2003.

JB Honey and citrus aromas lead to a richly textured and harmonious palate with pleasing length. A very fine example of a cru Muscadet.

CK A gently smoky nose ushers in a fresh, clean palate with a dense seam of fruit, salty minerals, real interest and bags of energy, persisting to a long finish. A wine with conviction and class.

BL Restrained nose with subtle aromas of white flowers and a touch of citrus, while the palate is refined and seamless with a fresh, clean finish. Further ageing will bring out even more – a terrific example of this cru.

N/A UK www.jardinededouard.vin
Since 2013 this 17ha domaine has been run by Edouard Massart. The 2ha parcel for this cru is planted on granite with the vines at least 60 years old. The grapes are picked by machine, and fermentation and maturation are in underground vats. Depending upon the vintage there is limited lees stirring. The first vintage of this cuvée was in 2009.

JB A touch of dry honey and evolved characters on the nose, followed by a richly textured, beautifully integrated palate with a satisfying, lingering finish. A very precise wine.

CK Classic, pure, smoky character on the nose magnified by notes of white peach and salty minerals. The palate is poised and vinous, with a rewarding zip of lychee and stone fruit, and a lifted acid freshness providing ample length.

BL Intriguing aromas of almond paste and white flowers lead to a soft, very well-formed palate with length and elegance in abundance.

This cuvée was first made in 2005 when it spent 24 months on its lees. By contrast the 2009 had 48 months as the length of lees ageing depends upon the nature and quality of the vintage. This cuvée comes from Le Haut Clos, a parcel of 1.2ha planted on schist. The grapes are harvested by hand and fermented and aged in underground vats to preserve freshness and vibrancy. Lees stirring was only in the first year.

JB Attractive nose of ripe fruit, enriched by notes of brioche and honey that are mirrored on the palate. Refined and harmonious, with a long, graceful finish. Impressive!

CK A smoky, crushed-mineral character on the nose ushers in a fresh and pure palate that feels convincing and dense, with smoky minerality and tension too. This entralls with its energy, as well as its substance and fine length.

BL Elegant, restrained style – tense and tightly packed – finishing with a saline mineral character in a taut, lean style.

N/A UK plbouchaud.free.fr/siteplb/accueil.htm
The grapes for Ponte Caffino come from a 1ha parcel on this 20ha domaine where the vines, on the site of an old quarry, are between 70 and 80 years old. Although the 2014 was machine harvested, Bouchaud now harvests this parcel by hand. He uses underground vats with very limited lees stirring – just two or three times immediately after the end of fermentation.

JB Attractive citrus aromas lead to a lean, tense palate which unravels and opens out in the glass, hinting at development still to come from further bottle age.

CK Golden pear skin and a subtle struck-match aroma, while on the palate this feels alive, energetic, delicately poised, fresh and cool, yet substantial with plenty of concentration and length. Serious.

BL Fresh, aromatic nose with notes of orange blossom and bergamot – a very pretty wine with a cherry-like acidity and a fresh, sappy finish.

N/A UK www.domainedelepinay.com
This is a 40ha domaine (17ha planted to Melon de Bourgogne), which has been converting to organic viticulture since 2011. The Clisson cru wine comes from a 2.5ha, warm, early-ripening site with 70-year-old vines grown on gravel and sand with granite beneath. Vinification and maturation are in underground vats and native yeasts are used. The first vintage of this cuvée was 2001 and while it normally spends 28 to 30 months on its lees, the 2012 was particularly vibrant so had 36 months.

JB Ripe citrus fruit and quince aromas lead to a richly-textured palate with a delightful length of fruit, lifted and refreshed by bountiful acidity.

CK Intensely aromatic citrus, capsicum and lychee scents. The textured palate is similarly fresh and pretty, with substantial depth, framed by energetic minerality. Delightful quality here.

BL Full nose of citrus fruit and quince, very rich and broad. The palate is bright and focused, yet deep and textured, with cool mineral fruit.

This wine comes from a 2ha parcel of 60-year-old, very well-exposed vines on a dome of orthogneiss overlooking a bend in the River Maine. Hand harvested, the wine is fermented and aged in underground vats for 45 months. The 2002 was the first long lees-aged vintage with 2003 and 2005 following.

JB Restrained citrus aromas followed by finely textured, evolved flavours enhanced by a fresh, salty minerality on the long finish.

CK A smoky yet restrained nose welcomes a beautifully harmonious palate, showcasing the gentle but well-framed texture of the warmer vintage, set against a fine-boned central core of minerality, within a fresh acid frame. Classic, elegant and precise, with gratifying length.

BL Pine and white peach on the nose, while the palate builds and unravels through to the finish, suggesting a wine with still more to come from further ageing.

One of just two wines from the Grandlieu zone in this tasting. This estate, run by Nicolas and Hervé Choblet, is in Bouaye, in the northwest, the vines on schist and amphibolite. Origine (first vintage 1996) comes from their oldest parcel of vines (1.5ha) planted by their great-grandfather in 1944. The 2006 spent 120 months on lees in an underground vat where the lees were stirred once or twice in first year then left untouched.

JB Complexity and finesse on both nose and palate, with enticing bottle-age characters – wonderfully textured and long. Another example of the benefits of long lees ageing, still fresh on the finish.

CK Wonderful floral, lychee and mineral freshness on the nose with a pure, elegant, textured palate and an appealing salty-mineral streak.

BL Very complex nose, full of intrigue evolved from extended lees contact, while the palate showcases a broad and rich concentration of fruit. Engaging, seamless finish.

Expert summary: Jim Budd

There were no real conclusions to be drawn between crus, vintages, time on lees or established and lesser-known producers – it was just a great line-up of quality wines

THE RESOUNDING SUCCESS of many Muscadets in this tasting does not come as a surprise, although the full depth of quality perhaps does.

It is encouraging that there are a number of lesser-known producers in our top 11 wines, as well as well-known names like Bernard Chéreau, Haut-Bourg and Luneau-Papin. There was also a range of vintages from 2003 to 2014 with three from 2009 and four from 2012. A number of the 2014s are still quite closed having just been recently bottled. It is clear that these cru wines benefit from further bottle age – this is underlined by the Luneau-Papin’s top-scoring 2007 Excelsior, which was bottled in November 2010.

Six different terroirs featured among our Exceptional and Outstanding wines: Goulaine (3), Château-Thebaud (3), Clisson (2), La Haye-Fouassière (1), Bouaye (1) and Mouzillon-Tillières (1). All, with the exception of Bouaye (Côté de Grandlieu), are in the Sèvre-et-Maine. Interestingly, of the three currently officially recognised crus, only Clisson featured among these top scorers.

Time on lees for our top 11 ranged from 28 months to 144 months. This suggests that there isn’t any optimum duration, except that for most, at least 24 months is required to gain extra complexity. Optimum time on lees depends on the vintage and how the wine matures.

Although these long lees aged wines represent a very small proportion of Muscadet produced, they should play a very important role in changing wine drinkers’ perceptions. The results show that these wines can be exceptional – special-occasion bottles at very affordable prices and best served with fish such as turbot and sole as well as lobster. Many will also age exceptionally well. To benefit from their full complexity, these wines should not be served too cold; many may well also benefit from being decanted.

Regrettably a number of these wines are currently unavailable in the UK. Hopefully this tasting will persuade merchants to look again at the Pays Nantais. ■

■ Pierre Luneau Papin, Excelsior, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine Goulaine 2007 Knowing the Luneau family for nearly 30 years, I have huge respect for them. This is richly textured with great complexity, length and balance. Great value too! 100 Drink 2017-2033

■ Poiron Dabin, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine Château-Thébaud 2009 My first experience of Jean-Michel Poiron’s long-aged wines was the impressive 2004 Haute Resolution. This powerful 2009 has rich, lightly honeyed fruit showing how very different cru wines can be from ‘normal’ Muscadet. 99 Drink 2017-2029

■ Vignoble Drouard, Les Templeries, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine Clisson 2012 I met Pascal Drouard in London when I tasted his fine 2008 Granite aged 63 months sur lie. The 2012 is softly textured withrich fruit allied with precise, fresh acidity. A great advert for the cru. 99 Drink 2017-2029

■ Poiron Dabin, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine Château Thébaud 2009 I wasn’t surprised to see Jean-Michel Poiron’s wine ranked so highly in our blind tasting. Keep an eye out for his Grande Réserve cuvée too. 99 Drink 2017-2029

■ Domaine du Haut Bourg, Origine du Haut Bourg, Muscadet Côtes de Grandlieu 2006 The Choblet brothers prove the wisdom of looking beyond Sèvre-et-Maine. Their 2012 Signature is also worth a look – it may be the greater wine, given time. 95 Drink 2017-2029

■ Domaine de la Pépière, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine Château Thébaud 2012 You can’t go wrong with Marc Ollivier! This is one of the region’s leading domaines, frequently turning out some of the best wines in the Muscadet region. 95 Drink 2017-2029

■ Bouin, Haut Clos de la Pierre, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine 2003 This is a great example of how Melon de Bourgogne can age, either in bottle or tank – and how extraordinarily good value Muscadet is. 98 Drink 2017-2026

■ Poiron Dabin, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine Château-Thébaud 2009 This was one of a handful Château-Thébaud wines that really impressed. Its typicity and concentration made it stand out just a little from the rest. 97 Drink 2017-2029

■ Vignoble Drouard, Les Templeries, Muscadet Sèvre-et-Maine Clisson 2012 Clisson was one of the most expressive crus in this tasting and this wine typified that more than the rest. Buy a few cases and put them away for 10 to 30 years, opening a bottle each year. 97 Drink 2017-2029

NB: the tasters’ top wines are not necessarily their top-scoring, rather those which, on learning the wines’ identity, they feel are the most notable given their provenance, price or other factors
